Maxcraft Avionics hires new Business and Commercial Specialist

Vancouver, BC, Decemberr, 2015 – Maxcraft Avionics Ltd, a leading avionics facility in Canada, announced today that they are pleased to welcome Mitchell Chiang to the Maxcraft team. Mitchell has decades of experience in the business and commercial segments of aviation and has been focusing on avionics support contract sales. He has strong connections with key players in the YVR community and has a loyal following for contract renewals. He will continue that role as a “Business and Commercial Specialist” with Maxcraft and will work out of the Maxcraft YVR-Vancouver office

“I am extremely pleased to have Mitchell join our sales team,” said Director of Business Development Steve Nunn. “His background, experience, and connections in the industry will be crucial to Maxcraft’s continued growth in the corporate aviation segment.”

As the “Business and Commercial Specialist”, Mr. Chiang will be directly responsible for working with aircraft owners, Directors of Maintenance, and/or Operations Managers to assist them in how best to structure their avionics repair strategy. Mitchell will work with the existing Maxcraft team in helping to advise operators on how best to meet the many new worldwide avionics mandates.

Mr. Chiang is a licensed AME-E avionics technician with almost 40 years of experience. In his most recent role, Mitchell served as avionics technician and was responsible for support contract sales for Avmax - Vancouver. Prior to that Mitchell was a partner in Penta Aviation Services, a full service jet maintenance facility in Vancouver.
